Zone 7 will sue

'Pleasanton owes us $225,000'

PLEASANTON — Zone 7 will "take legal steps if necessary" to collect an estimated quarter of a million dollars it claims the City of Pleasanton owes it in meter connection fees resulting from changes in meters it says the city admits making since 1972.

By a unanimous vote, directors of the zone, suppliers of two-thirds of the Valley's water, decided to notify the city of the stated connection fees for varying size meters during the three and one-half year span, to request the money it claims the city owes it and "to take all legal steps necessary to collect" the funds.

Chief of Water Resources Division Mun Mar told the astonished directors he recently discovered that Pleasanton changed 1,044 connections from a five-eighths meter to what the city calls a "special" or "modified" five-eighths meter which the zone claims is the same as the three-quarter-inch meter.

Pleasanton had been referring to the "modified" meter as three-quarters-inch, he said, and earlier this year said it was mistaken and changed all references to five-eighths-inch.

Assistant City Manager Alan Campbell has consistently argued that the meter is essentially five-eighths-inch and provides increased water pressure, but no increase in water use.

The zone has replied that it is required by law to charge a "reasonable" rate for connections and that the larger meter will put a greater strain on the system during times of peak demand.

Campbell claims tests conducted do not warrant the 50-percent increase in fees since the meters do not produce a 50-percent greater flow.

Mar counters that laboratory tests show a marked increase in flow and that the modified meter, which produces the same flow as the three-quarters-inch one, is rated at a guaranteed safe flow 50-percent more than the standard five-eighths-inch meter.

At stake is a $225 difference in connection fees charged by the zone through 1974, and a $325 difference since Jan. 1 of this year.

Mar concedes most of the changes occurred before 1975, but says his staff will have to figure out exactly how many were made during each period.

Assuming 1,000 meters were changed before 1975 and the remaining 44 after the first of the year, the bill would come to $239,300.

If more meters were changed after connection fees were raised, the bill will go higher.

The zone charged $450 dollars for the five-eighths-inch meter and $675 for the three-quarters-inch before the increase, and $650 and $975, respectively, after Jan. 1, 1975.

Director Robert Becker charged Pleasanton "flagrantly ignored our ordinance" in charging the lower fee for a meter the zone has repeatedly rated as equivalent to the larger one.

The city will have to collect from the people, director Robert Pearson, a former Pleasanton mayor said, or change those meters back to the five-eighths-inch meter. In either event, he continued, the zone has been shortchanged.

Newly elected chairman David Harris concurred, adding he thought it "a matter of principle and quite a bit of money."

Staff will present exact figures to the board at its July 16, meeting.

One 'New Town' that really made it

Dublin—the impossible success story

First of a series

Over the past 20 years, a score of so-called "New Towns" have sprung up across America. Most, unfortunately, have fallen on hard times, leaving broken dreams and disillussioned investors in their wake.

One shining exception to the general rule of failure for these New Towns has been Dublin, which 20 years ago was thought to have potential only as agricultural land.

The first Alameda County General Plan, which was finalized in 1957, visualized Dublin as rolling fields dotted with grazing cattle and Pleasanton as a peaceful hamlet of some 25,000.

Although Pleasanton's development certainly surprised the planners (its population is already over 32,000), Dublin's rapid and successful growth was completely unexpected as late as 1959.

The year before, a Los Angeles real estate man, Carl Buck, had let his option on nearly 6,000 acres of property in Dublin lapse and it was picked up by two more Southern California land promoters and developers — Ken Volk and Robert McLain.

Volk-McLain Communities, Incorporated purchased some 4,500 acres of land in what is now Dublin and approached the Alameda County Planning Department about setting up a brand new community.

Bill Fraley, who at that time was assigned to the project and is now Alameda County Planning Director, recalled "The system was there (to build a New Town). It was the first time it was used on a project of this size."

Fraley, other members of the planning department and Volk-McLain began a long process of amending the general plan to allow for homes and commercial development instead of salt licks and corrals, followed by detailed tract maps and plans for subdivisions.

"A great measure of the success can be attributed to the fact that planning was done by both the county and the developers" said Fraley.

"There were a lot of concerns expressed" he added "but nothing like what is happening today with Las Positas".

Other steps had to be taken. Sewage treatment had to be guaranteed for the homes that came in, water had to be supplied and schools had to be built to handle the influx of families.

However, schools proved to be fatal stumbling block in making San Ramon and Dublin a single community.

From the outset, questions about the boundary of the development to the north were brought up. There were many reasons for using the Alameda County line as the limit, but there were equally good reasons for setting the boundary further north.

The more northerly limit was finally decided on, but things went awry when the San Ramon School District failed to give up the land — which was at that time nearly uninhabited — to the Murray Elementary School District and the Amador Valley School District.

"That was the thing that began to create the division out there" said Fraley. "We weren't able to unify both sides of the county line" and Fraley believes that the SRSD decision was the key move.

"If we had to do it over again, we'd have put the 'X' on the county line" he said somewhat ruefully, but quickly added "It was a fairly successful operation."

And in other respects, it certainly was. Safeway put a food store in, houses began to go up, the Valley Community Services District was formed and soon a prosperous community sprung up.

As usual with New Towns, industrial development was slow in coming, but in Dublin's case, it did at least arrive. Liberty House, Eastman Kodak, Bank of America and numerous smaller companies have set up light industries in Dublin, bringing employment and a steadier tax base to the community.

However, some concern has recently been expressed that much of the land originally zoned industrial is being rezoned commercial for retail business, and thus Dublin's future tax base will be damaged.

"You have to be able to put your industrial land in a reserve and keep it there" said Fraley because industrial development is always the slowest. "That's the problem we're faced with now" the planning director said.

Of course much of the slowdown in industrial development can be attributed to environmental factors that were not anticipated when the plans were originally drawn up.

"You couldn't get any utility company to say 20 years ago 'We can't supply utilities to you' " he said. The system had operated for nearly 40 years with services automaticalLy supplied and Fraley said the anticipation of that change was very difficult to make.

A similar constraint applies to any predictions, but eventual combination with Pleasanton has to be considered. "I think it will probably improve the situation" said Fraley.

"If (cityhood) wasn't a good thing, there wouldn't be as many cities as there are" he added.

Although incorporation might well be the future of Dublin, even the submergence of the community's name could not dim the luster of its rapid growth and impressive development over the past 20 years.

Noise is the next 'pollution' target

A rough draft of a noise element program has been incorporated into Pleasanton's master plan, while Alameda County planners are three months away from developing such a framework for Dublin.

Ronald Eggers, a planner for the county, said that a two-man staff began formulating a program outlining the definition, sources and possible elimination or reduction of noise pollution in Dublin and other unincorporated Valley areas "early this year."

The entire plan is difficult to draw up, Eggers said, because three different agencies are each handling different aspects of the noise pollution problem.

"CalTrans (California Dept. of Transportation) has drawn up regulations for highways and surrounding areas, the Airport Planning Commission Staff handles airport districts, and we take care of the rest," Eggers said.

A preliminary report must be submitted to the state by Sept. 20, 1975 outlining recommendations for the Dublin area, Eggers reported. Pleasanton's Dept. of Community Development outlined a rough draft of a noise element in September, 1973, with a subsequent revision containing only slight modifications issued three months later.

Richard Glenn, a planning analyst for the city, said the preliminary noise element was accepted by the city council as one element of the master plan, and its final form will be ready by the end of summer.

The draft lists the major types of noise offenders, beginning with transportation vehicles of all sizes.

"Among motor vehicles, diesel trucks are the worst offenders. A single large diesel truck can produce more noise than thirty passenger automobiles," the report said.

"Buses, because their engine compartments are sealed, tend to radiate less noise than other heavy vehicles. However, bus noise generally increases with use because of damage to the seals, and some engine enclosures are so badly distorted that noise radiates almost as freely as if there were no engine compartment," the reprot stated.

Railroad and airport noise affect Pleasanton residents due to their proximity to the heart of the city. Train tracks run through the middle of Pleasanton and subject residents to "a high degree of railroad noise."

Although noise generated by the Livermore Airport "is not excessive at the present, it will increase as the number of flights originating and terminating at the airport increases," the report said.

Automobiles are the least noisy type of motor vehicle, but are a major noise source because of their numbers. Noise generated from cars is also dependent upon their condition, including the muffler system.

Other sources of noise pollution included in the report are generated "at industrial industrial and construction sites and from the sand and gravel harvesting area east of town." Noise is produced not only from the harvesting activities but from the hundreds of diesel trucks hauling gravel, the report states.

The Alameda County Fairgrounds also generates noise not only during the fair, "but to some extent year around due to sport car rallies and other events held there of an on-going nature." Fair directors' announcements that they are considering additional seasonal or year around activities could indicate increased levels of noise during those periods.

Finally, the use of power mowers, chain saws, hedge trimmers and such by the general public "add greatly to noise pollution within the planning area." The overall popularity of power devices increases continually and thus increases the ambient level of noise, the report states.

The report recommends that legislation be passed at the state or federal level "requiring that new motor vehicles be manufactured to operate in a quiet manner," and that the "City of Pleasanton will diligently encourage the passage of such legislation."

More than two years have passed since this report was accepted by the city council, yet the city attorney's office reports that no resolution was passed urging such a law be implemented.

By the end of this summer, Glenn reports, the noise element draft will be completed in its final form. But will it have any effect?

"We don't have the money to pay for noise meters, or even staff time to use them," Glenn said.

He said the policies outlined in the draft and in the final form as it emerges will be put into effect as money becomes available, but no special funds were set aside for noise abatement.

Cemetery at Camp Parks is new push

A revival of that campaign aimed at converting much of Camp Parks into a national cemetery has been initiated by State Senator Milton Marks.

Citing the inability of two other Bay Area national cemeteries to provide new burial plots since 1962, and the current federal interest in developing such a facility in Southern California, Marks is calling for renewed effort to set aside much of the old World War II base on Interstate 580 near Pleasanton as a military burial grounds.

The move could be a further blow to any talk of incorporating Dublin into the valley's third city since that same "surplus ground" within Camp Parks was seen as the industrial base for any future city north of Interstate 580.

Once totalling over 4000 acres on both sides of the freeway, the federal holding has been steadily reduced over the years, and today offers only about 2000 acres that might still be considered "surplus" to any current or planned use.

There is a new $5 million federal youth detention center within that compound, and the County of Alameda purchased close to 1000 acres for a development of a permanent prison, near the site of the existing Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center.

Getting ready for 'Pleasant Day'

Lisa Alcorn and Nicole Hefner are front and center for barbecue as being dished out by "Chef" Tony Macchiano. Actually, they're giving it a trial run as the annual Pleasanton Day community barbecue is scheduled Wednesday at the Fairgrounds. Barbecue will be served from 5 to 9 p.m. in the large barbecue area adjacent to the administration building. Three ticket packages, offering main gate admission, a day at the races and a scrumptious chicken barbecue with all the trimmings, are now on sale at the Chamber of Commerce, 10 W. Neal St. There'll be games for the kids, introduction of new chamber members and an appearance by Maid of Alameda County Lori Hickman. Macchiano and Dr. Barry Winston are in charge of the event. — (Times Photo)

Donlon School construction start eyed for Monday

After a seemingly endless series of delays and frustrations, the Murray Elementary School District will take the first concrete step towards construction of the Dolan site intermediate school at Monday night's board meeting.

The 8 p.m. meeting at Murray School will witness the opening of bids for the intermediate school in the Silvergate area, with actual grading and construction work to begin immediately after a bid is accepted.

The school is the final one planned for MESD and has been held up for nearly a year due to litigation over the price of the property.

It is scheduled for completion in January of 1977 and will house seventh and eighth graders presently attending Donlon and Dublin schools.

Only a last ditch appeal by Superintendent Don Williams and Business Manager Phillip Chubb before the State Allocations Board early in June allowed the district to start construction.

PLEASANTON — The magic of the theatre and the thrill of being a performer draws people of all ages and sizes.

But long before the opening night jitters comes sometimes harrowing experience of auditions.

About 80 youngsters turned out last Wednesday at the Veterans Building to audition for roles as the king's children in the Pleasanton Playhouse production of "The King and I," which opens Aug. 8.

The photos on this page are a pictorial essay of the confusion, uncertainty and the satisfaction that are an integral part of an audition.

Qualified OK to New Town water query

PLEASANTON — Zone 7 directors Wednesday agreed to answer a request for information on water supply from New Town developer Harlan Geldermann, but carefully qualified their response after hearing arguments from other Valley agencies.

Valley Community Services District President Lila Euler and Livermore City Councilman Don Miller strongly appealed to the water board directors to look carefully at any decision to provide water for Geldermann's controversial 45,000-resident community.

Zone 7 director Robert Becker's motion to answer the request will stipulate the status on the availability of untreated water; state the problems in the treatment and distribution of water; point out that service might only be considered if the quality and quantity of water to present customers is maintained; and show the need to meet Valley-wide environmental considerations.

The last consideration came from Alameda County Counsel Kelvin Booty's reading of the California Environmental Quality Act which charges all public agencies to take into account the total environmental impact of any of their decisions.

The reading means an Environmental Impact Report on water service to New Town will have to be prepared.

Miller pointed out to the board that the existing EIR, which he said was unfavorable to the proposed development, addresses itself first to air quality and merely glosses over the impact on water.

Zone 7 directors jumped over their prepared agenda and followed reorganization of the board with a presentation by Wilsey and Ham representative John K. Smith.

Smith, speaking for Geldermann's consulting engineers, told the board his "is a rather simple request ... tell us if you have water available — which we feel you do — and whether or not you're willing to serve us" if a contract can be worked out.

The availability of water service, he noted, is necessary before the firm will proceed with its presentation to the county board of supervisors and other governing agencies.

Euler was the first to speak against the request, telling the board VCSD is responsible to the Regional Water Quality Control Board (RWQCB) for the discharge of effluents into the Alameda Creek.

Any increase in use at the eastern end of the Valley, she argued, would decrease the quality of water in VCSD and hence increase the amount of salts discharged.

VCSD will face severe fines from RWQCB if it exceeds the agency imposed limits, she said, hinting the district would consider Zone 7 responsible and might be forced to take action against the board.

Miller reiterated Livermore's recently passed resolution which argues service to New Town would decrease the quality and quantity of water to existing consumers.

He also made note of the Environmental Quality Act requiring broader study of the impact on the Valley.

Zone 7's directors loudly proclaimed their commitment to continued quality water to existing customers, and pointed out that any expansion of service to new users would be allowed only if the present users weren't adversely affected.

Miller quickly told the board of the zone's own study which shows a decrease in water quality over a five year projected span.

Directors instructed staff to draft a letter of response to Geldermann's engineers, and to include their four conditions for consideration of service.

The letter will be voted on at the July 16 meeting.

Directors opened their meeting with reorganization of the board, replacing outgoing chairman Joseph Concannon with vice-chairman David Harris and elevating secretary Robert Becker to vice-chairman.

Robert Pearson was named as secretary.

Night meet schedule revived

Alameda County Bureau

OAKLAND — The Alameda County Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday to have another go at evening meetings.

Views on the board range from Supervisor Tom Bates, who would like to see all board meetings held during the evening hours, to Supervisor John Murphy, who is totally opposed to the whole idea of night meetings.

By a 4-1 vote, the board agreed to continue the experiment begun in April and hold the first Tuesday meeting of each month in August, September and October at 7:30 p.m. — rather than the traditional 9 a.m. starting time.

Supervisor Joseph Bort said he believed the April-June experiment with night meetings "was some thing of a bust but I'm willing to try it for another three months."

Supervisor Charles Santana added he thought the board should try the experiment for a longer period of time and he also said he would like to "get some reaction from the community."

Responding to Bates' suggestion that agendas for night meetings be stacked with items of public interest, Chairman Fred Cooper said, "My feeling is that people show up if they're interested in something, whether the meeting is at night or in the day."

County Administrator Loren Enoch presented the board with a report showing the additional cost for scheduling an evening meeting to be $332.

Bates' motion to try one night meeting a month for a 12-month period recevied only the support of Santana but a motion to try it for the next three months passed by a 4-1 vote, with Murphy in opposition.

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco grand jury will recommend the firing of three top city Public Utilities Commission officers for their handling of the Sunol Valley Golf Course case, it was reported earlier this week from City Hall.

The jury, said the report, will ask the dismissal of PUC general manager John Crowldy, PUC president Welton Flynn and the commission's finance officer, John Christensen, be dismissed.

Frances Moore of Pleasanton is about to win. The $2 ticket she bought for her daughter returned $207.40.

Sally Steinhauff tallies her winnings while her companions share her obvious delight.

They come in droves; the ladies in their floppy hats; the oldtimers with their folding chairs, clutching their racing forms, their binoculars strapped over their sholders. The young hopefuls are there too, pushing their strollers of sleeping babies. "Maybe today we'll hit it," shines in their eyes.

They're all heading toward the racing grandstand to break the bank of Pleasanton today. Smiles are on every face. Today is is my day.I know today is my day. I can feel it at my gut level. My stars are in their right orbit. They're running horses with the names of two of my children. I can't loose today. Today is my day..

They all study the program diligently. The jockey's weight, the horse's sire, times for the last race — important facts to be considered before placing that all important bet.

But more often than not emotions get in the way, especially with women. "My son is in the sixth grade, so I just have to bet on his horse 'Sixth Grade Class'. " Or Oh, look. There's one with 'sunset in the name, and I just love sunsets."

About the third or fourth race faces are more pinched. If you've won the first race exacta, you smile the rest of the day, even though you lose at every other race. If you haven't won anything up to the fourth, a tightness grips your insides. You're not so sure that Bob's choices or the Hermit's green sheet were all that good.

You notice that thereare only men lined up at the$10 windows. The women line up at the two dollar windows early. In fact they can't wait from one race to the next; as if it's more fun betting than actually winning. The men stand firm to keep their place in line and watch the women with utter disapproval. If a woman doesn't know how to bet, that's not the place to learn.

The race track official is working for speed, not public relations. "Just give me the number of the horse, lady," he says with a scathing look that will send a green-horn female quivering into a corner.

The fun is to see the people win, and some actually do. Like the elderlycouple that got so excited they spilled their orange julius all over themselves. And you knew the young couple with the baby had really counted on that horse's winning and they were delirious.

As the sun goes down shading Mt. Diablo to a beautiful pink, the faces are tired. Some are sitting on the hard cement which by now is littered with used racing forms, bad tickets, cups, napkins andscattered cigarette butts. But, I can't leave until the last race, because that's the exacta and I've got a strong hunch about that race, and you know — you never know.

Herringer eyes BART task

OAKLAND — Frank Herringer, son of a New York subway signalman, has an entire rapid transit system to worry about now.

Whether that's a step down from his previous job as administrator of the Federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration in Washington, D.C., is questionable.

But Herringer, 32, personable, and waiting for a moving van to pull up to his new home in Lafayette, is keeping busy trying to bail Bay Area Rapid Transit out of its latest crisis.

BART is once again facing a budget deficit and has given layoff notices to 87 employes.

Herringer in an interview with Lesher Newspapers said he hopes to convince labor unions representing the laid off workers to give up a retirement benefit in order to preserve the 87 jobs.

He explained that under the current labor contract with the Amalgamated Transit Local 1555, BART agreed to pay 7 per cent of the retirement benefits which had previously been paid by employes.

Now, if the unions agree to pay the 7 per cent portion again, Herringer believes BART can save enough money to keep the 87 on the payroll.

BART's board of directors had ordered the budget be cut by $6 million, necessitating the layoffs.

Herringer said that while he knew BART had a history of crisis upon crisis, he didn't expect one the day he started work.

He began work last Tuesday, although he has been meeting from time to time with individual board and staff members since he was hired.

Why does a Washington bureaucrat toss aside a job as head of an agency to run an organization that's been in hot water since it was created?

"Well there are a lot of reasons," Herringer replied. "I'd done that for two and a half years and I hadn't done this."

Herringer said BART's "newness" and the significance of the rapid transit system as the first of a new breed in the nation also pulled him from Washington, as did the Bay Area itself.

Also, Herringer had decided that he would quit at UMTA by the end of 1976.

The 1976 elections might also play a part in how long he stayed.

BART's board of directors came along at the right time and Herringer decided to make the move. The decision, he says, wasn't easy.

Herringer said he was tough for BART to get and that his decision to take the job was "very close."

But his wife, Nancy, was also ready for a change and will join him Friday after quitting her job as an international commodities analyst for the state department.

Sipping coffee from a mug, Herringer said he intends to study whether night and weekend transit service is feasible now, despite a vote last week by the BART directors not to start such service because of financial considerations.

Should the unions and board members agree with his ideas for keeping employes, starting night service could be done if the costs aren't prohibitive.

As a long-range goal, Herringer sees BART extending to areas other than those now served and possibly the creation of a single transit agency for the region.

Herringer doesn't know whether BART should extend to other counties such as San Mateo and Santa Clara.

But he said that BART is certain not to get federal funding for extension construction unless it decides to build to well populated areas which would Patronize the system.

BART, Herringer said, is a challenge.

While in Washington, he viewed it as the first modern-day rapid transit system, a pace-setter for other urban systems to follow.

It is crucial that BART work properly so that critics of transit can't point to this system as a failure and rationale for cutting off money to rapid transit projects.

As head of UMTA, Herringer said it was his impression that the people of the Bay Area "Were over promised and had higher than reasonable expectations as a result."

People falsely were given the impression that BART would run perfectly when "a switch was turned."

Herringer said eventually the Bay Area should have one agency to run its four major transit systems.

"One coordinated agency could do it all," he said.

Managing BART will be a tough job, but no tougher than any of the others he has previously held, Herringer said.

Herringer is currently scouring the nation's transit systems in search of an assistant general manager for operations.

Before his appointment as UMTA's administrator, Herringer worked for Cresap, McCormick and Pagett, a well-known auditing firm.

Lighter Times

I am going back to the County Fair tomorrow with a critical and discerning eye.

No more Mr. Nice Guy.

Our first two treks around the grounds were strictly pleasure, one with camera and the other to soak-up the sights, sounds and smells.

We were overwhelmed by the latter. Had to take a bicarbonate of soda when we got home....even though we didn't touch an onion-smothered burgr or the cotton candy.

Must have been the corn dog on the midway and the chocolate frosty nears the arts and crafts display.

The tour started in the Young California Building where we noted Laurie Bowling's stuffed animal on display. The 4-H'ers are a marvelous group. Super-talented with the needle and thread and baked goods....also quite knowledgable with animals.

The displays in the YCB seemed dwarfed by the immense structure. Has anyone thought of renting the place out to the Goodyear blimp in the offseason?

We showed outstanding restraint while eyeballing the chocolate goodies at the 4-H cake booth.

On the way to the carnival we saw Jodi Scott of the Buena Vista 4-H with her kid and snapped a picture.

Carnival was doing so-so business. The monster atop the Geister Bahn sideshow wasn't scaring anybody or creating a line at the elevated ticket booth. Kids are too blase for that type of stuff.

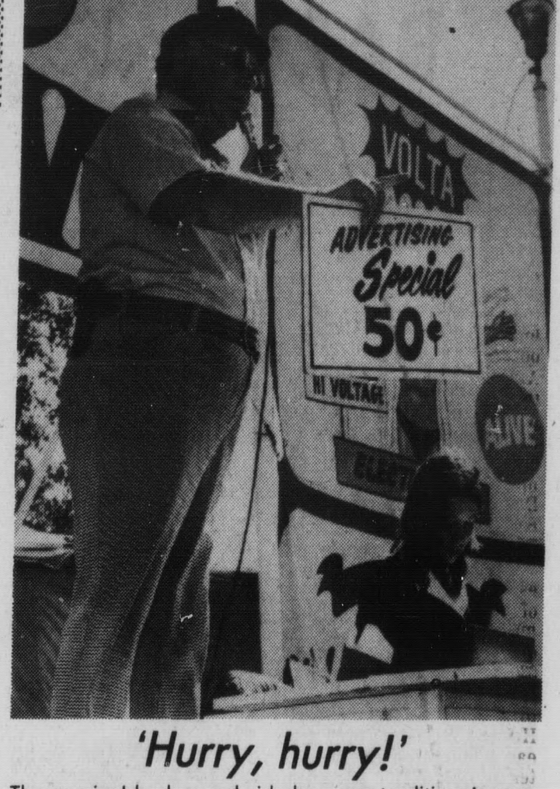
Reminds me of the time I brought a tarantula to class and the poor thing cowered in the corner of the box, trying to fend off the advances of a horde of fifth graders.

On to the Home Arts Building, one of the more interesting exhibit sections. Then the breathtaking horticulture displays. Over to the Exhibition Hall...."pitch city." Yes, there's indeed something for everyone, even those who believe that only "straights" go to a county fair.

But tomorrow we're going back with a critical eye.

No more corn dogs ...shove the goody-goody youth group displays from view....I'm going behind the scenes!

I've got the sinking feeling, though, that I'm not going to find much.



'Hurry, hurry!'

The carnival barker and sideshow are traditional parts of any midway, as witness this scene at the Foley and Burk Carnival. "For just 50 cents, one-half a dollar, see the amazing, the spectacular ... come one, come all ladeez and gentlemen, hurra', hurra'! For more about the carnival and fair in Pleasanton, see Al Fischer's column at left and photos below. — (Times Photo)

County fair parade awards

Blue Angels, Crusader band impress

The Harvest Park Crusader band, Tri-Valley Royalaires and Blue Angels were the big trophy winners at last Sunday's annual County Fair parade.

According to co-chairmen Bob D'Arcy and Ed McFadden of the Pleasanton Jaycees, this year's parade fielded 225 units compared with 195 last year, and the Pleasanton event now ranks second in California in importance.

The Blue Angels received the coveted Sweepstakes Trophy.

Harvest Park won in the school bands category and the Royalaires were first among drum and bugle corps entries. The Blue Devils and Banda de Guerra were runnerups.

Also adjudged winners and runnerups were:

Drum Corps Senior — Blue Angels, South Bay Barons.

Drum Corps Junior — Blue Devils, El Charro.

Drill Team Women, Junior — Trim Trippers, Sailorettes.

Drill Team Mens, Senior — Aahmes Shrine Patrol.

Drill Team Men, Junior — The Californians.

Fair horseshoe pitching contest slated July 13

Before the days of the automobile when the horse was king, horseshoe pitching was a major competitive event at the Alameda County Fair.

Today, the sport is enjoying a healthy revival, as will be evidenced at the Fairgrounds Sunday, July 13 when the annual horseshoes tournament is held.

Orginally, this event was set for Sunday, July 6, but the date has been amended according to Bill Wilcox, events chairman of the sponsoring Livermore Valley Horseshoe Club.

Slated for a 10 a.m. kickoff, the one-day event is expected to draw some of the finest pitchers in Northern California.

Courntey Minehart, president of the LVHC, stated that there will be no qualifying round, and the competition for the $75 first-place award will be on a one person basis with age no barrier. He added that, for the first time, the tournament will include women and children ages 8 and up.

The horseshoes are especially made, weigh about two pounds and eight ounces each, and cost about $10 per pair. Contestants throw across a 40-foot course hoping to ring a foot-high stake.

Feinberg tops mineral, gem display awards

Awards in 16 categories of mineral and gem department judging have been made at the Alameda County Fair with Abe Feinberg of Livermore gaining the "most outstanding exhibit" notation.

Feinberg won first and second-place ribbons in specimen collection, first in specimen-collected-in-the-field, a first and a third in crystals.

Livermore residents dominated many of the categories in minerals and gems.

Les Trefethen was top award winner in Indian artifacts and Evelyn Bankhead was second. Ramal Jones was runnerup in crystals and G.E. Trefethen was third in nodules and geodes.

Stroller filled with stuffed animals, young fair - goer must hoof it.

Dixie Cups

Amador Valley High dixieland group, dubbed the "Dixie Cups," run through a number prior to going "on stage" at the Young California Building. Group is anchored by John Finch on piano and Nick DiScala on clarinet. Daily schedule of 4-H and other youth activities are centered in brand new building at Fairgrounds. Booths with information on Chabot and Ohlone Colleges are also located in the building.

Home mortgage rates

Variable interest loans mean greater opportunity

"Variable interest rate loans will mean greater opportunities for the average American families to own their own homes in a period when increasing interest rates are forcing the costs of owning beyond the reach of many buyers," according to Don Garlington of Tri-Valley Brokers, 8928 San Ramon Rd., Dublin.

"In November of 1974 interest rates had reached a level of 11%. The cost in terms of monthly payments to a buyer of a home with a new loan of $35,000 would have been $333 for principle and interest, plus taxes and insurance. However, only six months earlier," Don goes on, "interest rates were at 8%, and the monthly payments on the same $35,000 loan would have been only $257. A buyer earning $1400 per month who could have qualified in May would have to be earning $1700 to qualify for the same loan on the same home six months later."

We asked Don to explain what is meant by a "variable interest rate loan. "In the simplest terms it is a loan whereby the monthly house payments can be increased or decreased, which also means that the homeowner's monthly household budget can come up short at the end of the month, or it may have a little extra left over. To most buyers this is a terrifying thought. By using a variable interest rate (VIR) loan, the periodic short supply of money available for loans will, hopefully, be eliminated. It is short supply of money which theoretically causes higher interest rates."

"In cases where withdrawals from Savings & Loans exceed deposits, a ¼% increase in mortgage rates will produce millions of dollars for new loans which should assure prospective buyers an opportunity to obtain a loan at a reasonable rate of interest."

Don assures us that the VIR loan will be closely regulated under California law and the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco. "Twice yearly the FHLB will publish an 'index' or standard which impartially establishes the lending industry cost of money being lent. This average is what it costs the lenders to do business. Currently the index is 6.45 while mortgage rates are 9%. The difference is approximately the lender's gross profit. Therefore, twice yearly when the FHLB publishes this index, and if it has increased by at least 1/10 of one percent, the lender may, after 30 days written notice, increase the home owner's interest on the loan principle by a like amount not exceeding ¼ of a percent. On the good side, if the index should decrease by 1/10 percent or more, the lender must decrease the interest rate by a like amount."

"If this program had been in effect in December, 1966, and a buyer had purchased a new home using a VIR loan the interest rate would have been 6.5%; the index at that time was 5.23. Over the next 8 years the rates remained fairly stable until late 1974 when interest rates reached 11% in some areas. That original 1966 purchase would have increased to only 7.6%, substantially less than the 11% rates. At the moment, rates have leveled at 9%, but if they should again climb, as some economic pessimists predict, to 12 or 13%, that same 1966 loan could never go higher than 9% as there is a 2.5% ceiling that a loan can be increased over the original contract rate. It is important to note that a ¼% increase on a $35,000 loan at 9% is only $6.32 per month or less depending on the remaining term of the loan, and it would require 5 years, increasing the rate semi-nnually, to reach the maximum allowable rate of 11 ½%, or $65.00, more per month than originally required."

There are additional benefits from the VIR program which make it very favorable, especially to those homeowners subject to frequent transfers and buying and selling of a number of homes. "Such loans," Don tells us, "are assumable at the current rates presently on the loan regardless of higher market rates and at very modest assumption fees. Had you been able to assume a VIR loan in November of 1974 the maximum rate would have been 7.6% while the market rates were at 11%. This is a new plus for heretofore unassumable conventional loans. Another big plus for VIR is that pre-payment penalties may be waived anytime your present interest is higher than the original interest rate level. This could mean a saving of several thousand dollars at the time of sale of your home."

Despite the fact that there is still strong opposition from congressional leaders, labor unions, etc., Don feels that the variable rate mortgage will soon be widely accepted for home financing 19 states, including California, specifically authorize state chartered Savings & Loans to make VIR loans. "VIR loans may not be a panacea to higher interest rates, but hopefully they will assure future buyers and sellers that when they make plans to buy or sell money will be available at reasonable rates and the opportunities for such purchases and ownership will be available to the average income families."

Livermore students top voc-ed

Livermore students dominated the power mechanics and graphic arts categories of the vocational and industrial arts exhibits at the Alameda County Fair earlier this week.

Winning a first place in the Fair judging for power mechanics was Don Van Dyke. Linda Haule was second and Ken Watts, also of Livermore, earned an honorable mention.

In the graphic arts section, Lee Baker, Robert Ponce and Richard Watchempino all gained honorable mentions.

In the plastics judging, Craig McLoughlin and Mark Schmidt of Livermore received first-place awards and Bill Barnett a second.

In wood lathe judging, Lon Hatten of Amador Valley High received an honorable mention. Ken Yurrer of Amador earned a similar award in the 9th-10th grade division of mechanical drawing.

Easy to come by

A beautiful home with a pool such as this (above) is easily affordable with a variable interest rate loan. The VIR loan should increase money available for loans, and keep interest rates, and therefore monthly payments, low.

An above-ground pool is easy to set up and maintain, and gives many hours of enjoyment.

Backyard pools set up fast, easy

The hot summer days are on their way, and the nicest way to "cool off" during the summer is in your own backyard pool.

If you purchasp an above ground pool this weekend, next weekend you can be swimming. And these pools are bigger and better than ever.

You can get an above ground pool in one of the many types and sizes to fit in almost any backyard. These pools can be handsomely landscaped with redwood decking and plants to make it a permanent feature of your backyard. The investment offers family fun without adding to your property taxes or requiring a building permit.

A typical above ground pool features a 10 year liner warranty and galvanized steel components with baked on vinyl paint. You can also get them completly outfitted to minimize your up keep.

Pooling ideas

by Joe Toland

Swimming Pools have long been a focus of family enjoyment and healthful exercise — and its not too late to enjoy one in your own backyard this year.

Properly planned and supervised, a pool will add thousands of dollars in value to your home, as well as adding to the beauty of your backyard. The pool does not have to be expensive to be properly integrated with your landscaping. It is how you do it, and not how how much you spend doing it.

Pools can be constructed quickly and will have you swimming long before the hot summer season is over — sometimes within 30 days after excavation.

There are many advantages of dealing with a small local pool contractor, and personal supervision is one of the most important. The planning of your pool, its supervision during construction, and its start-up when finished is usually handled by the owner of the company. A more personal touch is there.

Another advantage of dealing with a local contractor is the amount of assurance you can have in the financial integrity of the contract. Paid up lein releases given to the owner prior to his making payments can give proper assurance that he will not have a financial exposure when the pool is completed.

A small contractor can arrange for most types of financial assurance that might be required to prove all sub-contractors have been paid.

The small contractor can provide you with a swimming pool that will be everything you had in mind and more — completed and guaranteed on a timely basis.

A bumper crop for the cops

Pleasanton police rounded up three juveniles they claim are responsible for "ripping off" — literally — a sack full of car emblems last week. The two-day spree started when one of the youngsters noted a loose emblem and tore it from the car, police say. His companion, perhaps thinking it looked like fun, took one that was well attached to a car. The summer diversion snowballed and the youths managed to scampter through several shopping center and apartment parking lots before being caught. Officer Peter Grawes displayed part of the loot for Times photographer Pete Griffith.

Folklorico, horseshoes at Fair today

Livermore Fair day Monday

LIVERMORE — Monday will be Livermore Day at the Alameda County Fair and residents will be treated to a special $6 admission-reserved grandstand seat at the races-steak dinner tickets as well as local art and entertainment.

A total of 250 special package tickets are available through the Chamber of Commerce, 1723 Barcelona St., and will be distributed for $6 on a first-come, first-serve basis. For more information, contact the chamber, 447-1606.

An Art In Action program will open at noon in the art exhibit area and will feature the work of Livermore Art Association members Edna Tunison, Marilyn Calhoun, Muriel Doggett and Margo Kirkwoog.

Livermore Community Hour will begin at 2 p.m. in the Court of Four Seasons with Chamber President Marshall Kamena acting as master of ceremonies. Mayor Archer Futch will make an appearance followed by entertainment organized by chairwoman Carol Jean Famariss and co-chairman John Strong.

Featured will be dances (including those of the Spanish variety), piano and organ playing, baton twirling and acrobatics and gymnastics.

There will be two divisions of entertainment — juniors, children under 14 years old and seniors, performers 15 years and older.

Also, Lee Lovell, Judi Thompson, Karen Davenport, Cindy Sharp, Becky Carstenson, Andrea Carstenson, Robin Cherb and Teresa Pettibone.

Senior performers will include: Stephanie O'Brien, Debbie Kendrick, Currin Eason, Catherine Calo, Laura Liptai, Lisa Futch, Kelli Wall, Lani Toman and Linda Toman.

Also, Danielle Blanchard, Tracy Meier, Ron Staggs and Susan Petoletti.

The Granada High School Pep Band also will make an appearance.

Leathercraft, photography and weaving demonstrations will be conducted throughout the day and the 7 p.m. stage show will feature Guy and Ralna, Singing Stars of the Lawrence Welk Show, Tony Urbano Marionettes, Margo Tembey Dancers and Jack Fisher Orchestra.

The 9 p.m. stage show will have Guy and Ralna and the Lawrence Welk Singing Stars.

Admission to the shows is free and at the amphitheatre.

Gates open at 10 a.m. to the fair and post time for the races is 1:30 p.m.

John B. Edmands, Editor and Publisher

Remember the ninth day of July!

At a time when we all look to local government as the instrument of "sound, long-range planning," the City of Pleasanton would like to call the following to your attention:

A "very important" meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m., Wednesday, July 9 at which "your ideas" are solicited on the subject of a redevelopment program of city-wide significance.

A public session billed as "offering long-term planning direction to the entire valley" is booked for the Rincon Avenue School in Livermore, 7:30 p.m., July 9. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will be there, and your attendance is also urged.

Finally, the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce and the City of Pleasanton join in reminding you that this community's "Day at the Fair" will be climaxed with an evening barbecue and festivities at the fairgrounds. Oh yes — the date is Wednesday, the ninth day of July.

Now we have always heard that the bureaucratic left and right hands are rarely in touch with one another, but we suspected that fault was shared largely by state and federal people; certainly it does not apply to OUR city crew! But alas, organized confusion appears to have come to our town, also.

All we can do is to agree that all three of the above events are important, even vital. We would urge you — somehow — to make plans now to have a voice (or a stomach) in all three.

Let's see now ... if Aunt Sue takes in the big water meeting at Livermore, and the wife and kids swing by the Veterans Memorial Building for the Pleasanton Redevelopment session, maybe that will allow the old man to make use of at least one of the six tickets we just bought for that "Pleasanton Day" feed at the fairgrounds.

Which leaves just one problem: Do you think grandma would mind representing the family at the city planning commission meeting scheduled for that same evening?

The week in retrospect

Religion in classroom

Inherent in the Fundamentalist school concept are values which if not stated verbally or in brochures by Livermore and Pleasanton supportersare nonetheless applied.

All deal with the basic character traits...good behavior, respect for one's elders as well as those about him and dedication to a purpose (in this case learning).

While many Fundamentalists would balk at the direct link, the concept at least infers religious beliefs, an awareness of God as we consider a deity to be in the western world.

Anyone who attended public schools in the early 50s or before may well remember instances where church and state moved in unison, if only for 15 minutes or a half-hour each week.

It usually took the form of "being excused" for that period of time (from public school) to attend a Protestant or Catholic class...the time being spent in a social-religious past time if you were Protestant or Catechism if Catholic.

We did not question this pursuit, nor did any parents of children we knew at the time.

To follow this practice now could be tantamount to bringing the secular world, not to mention Madelyn Murray O'Hare, down on the shoulders of public schools and organized religion.

Yet, the struggle over prayer versus no-religious exercise in the public classroom has been an eternal one. It has, like so many other basic human values, gone from the "unquestioned" point on the spectrum to "reevaluation" in the past two decades.

There is evidence now that the wheel may be turning toward voluntary prayer in the schools as well as Fundamentalist beliefs in the manner of educating.

The latter is borne out by the National Back to God Movement, headquartered in Washington, D.C., and supporting voltntary school prayer legislation.

The movement is taking a new approach with the nucleus being bills introduced in both houses of Congress by Senator Jesse Helms (SB283) and Representative John Ashbrook (HR2414). Both seek to restore voluntary prayer in one step, unlike the difficult and complicated Constitutional Amendment process.

These bills would take away from the Supreme Court of the United States and the District courts any jurisdiction over cases that have to do with voluntary prayer in the schools and other public institutions.

The final decision will then rest with the state supreme courts.

States Mrs. Bennett G. Miller, press contact for the movement, "National legislators and lawyers often forget that local and state authorities should decide local and state issues."

The wording of SB283 and HR2414 is identical and reads in part: "A bill to limit the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States and of the District Courts to enter any judgement, decree, or order denying or restricting as unconstitutional voluntary prayer in any public school."

This writer believes the statement and similar references throughout the bill will stir considerable opposition. It restricts our national institutions and anything that even gives the aura of "restriction" in this day and age risks the wrath of the great liberal machine...Republicans, conservatives and President Gerald Ford not withstanding.

This writer is sympathetic to the National Back to God Movement, as we are to the Fundamentalist concept in the education realm. As an ex-teacher, though, we would be much more supportive of the latter educational approach.

Just as an aside, for those who believe strongly in both movements, a conference entitled the Evangelical Released Time Christian Education Conference is being held August 4-8 at the Asilomar Conference Grounds in Pacific Grove.

The conference should be well worth attending by educator and laymen alike.

Letters to the editor

Public school woes

Editor, The Times:

The thought has been stated by men more knowledgeable about the political complications and intricacies of the system of public education in Livermore, but I'd like to give it a try, expressing my version of the subject.

So in the spirit of liberty which inspired our revolutionary Founding Fathers ... I write about the concept of the Fundamental School and give my superiors my opinion as a free citizen ...

In metaphor I see a modern automobile which is a powerful technological wonder, ever being improved upon by hard-working and skillful engineers (to which vehicle I liken the potential educational power of the minds which form the Livermore schools, from Superintendent down to wherever), an automobile which is not maintained, however, by skillful mechanics so that it will keep in top shape.

This car is looked on by ... the public and its elected Board of Education as needing to be replaced because it is breaking down. The owners want to qo back to the model their fathers drove because their modern car is falling to pieces ...

If these owners had paid for the upkeep of the vehicle, they would now have transport which would be dependable and efficient on the freeways as well as on the country roads and community streets.

"We need smaller classes ... ," teachers of the primary grades have said for years, and others of us have complained of misdirected values in the Board and in a few among the administrative hierarchy ...

I believe instead of creating new systems of school management that we should reassess our values in the light of what our kids need. Instituting a Board-Administration-Staff meeting in open forum and making it mandatory for all to attend might keep the lines of communication more open. The public could come and get into the action.

Tht's Americanism to me. And in the long run, the money we spend is going to pay off our sacrifices with greater peace of mind. If our kids were better educated, all of us would be happier ...

If the Fundamental School is funded as poorly as the present schools are, it will fall flat on its fundament. If we hire more teachers and fairly pay for the educational engineers we already have, we may see that within our children may be spinning along the wheels of hope for the future.

Motel waitress

Editor, The Times:

I have been in a (motel chain) in Torrance California for a week long convention. They too pay $2 and hour to waitresses who must then kick back 25 cents an hour as well as pay the bus boys 10% of their tips. These nation-wide chains exist due to groups of people needing a place to sleep and meet in close proximity. We spoke to the waitresses and they would welcome a union but cannot instigate any organizing lest they lose their meager jobs. NOBODY works just for fun. EVERYBODY works because they need the money. A waitress who is somewhat transient in an area does not move just for the change of scenery but because the other place gives better wages and or fringe benefits.

I was most interested in your series on the subject, and having been the best waitress I knew how to be, I felt it was not totally fair to the help. In my day I was proud to do the best job I was capable of and I had a following that made me a valuable employe and sought after by owners of eateries.

The help in (that motel), like other franchise houses, are overworked and underpaid. People in this position seldom give good service because there is no real incentive. They are just glad to get through their day.

The food was mediocre at best and uneatable at worst. I wasted money and food, both of which I abhor, because it was unpalatable ... The maid had 26 rooms to do. A vacuum was never used nor did I hear one anywhere in the hotel during my five day stay. Sheets were not changed ...

In my day we were proud to do our work well and efficiently, and we too were woefully underpaid.

You get what you pay for and I thought you might like the viewpoint of one who was there as help and as a customer, and one who has no fear of losing her job now.

Responsible help

Editor, The Times:

Your front page coverage (June 27) concerning Pleasanton Hotel owner Terry Hufft's attitude toward employing only "professional" help was, put mildly, disgusting. Since when does paying union dues automatically make people any more qualified or willing to work than non-union people? Hufft's brief encounter with the girl from "one of the franchise estabishments" makes me no more sympathetic to his cries. Of all the college or college-bound students I know, all of them are more than willing to work — ANYWHERE — and show up on time. Hufft's comments are clearly demeaning to all of the hard working youth in this valley.

"Those kids don't need it," ($), and "have no responsibilities." HA! Mr. Hufft obviously isn't aware of today's high cost of a college education, and that college students need money to help pay for that and help support themselves. An overview of Hufft's statements suggest that he has had everything in life handed to him on a silver platter. Or wasn't he ever young and/or in school trying to support himself?

In my opinion, Mr. Hufft owes a public apology to all of us "non-professionals" who work long, hard hours trying to help our parents make ends meet and get us a good education simultaneously. The Times can help by printing this letter — but since I, as a student of the University of Southern California have "no responsibilities," I will probably already have a pack on my back and be off on my motorcycle into the sunset.

round the town

There have been, I must confess, several in my life. Each with their own special kind of charm. Each leaving some poignant memory that neither time nor new alliances can erase.

I had not long been on this valley scene when Archie and I struck up an acquaintance. It was on St. John Street, where the then-weekly productions of The Times found form and substance, in a strange little quonset structure that seemed to fit the neighborhood, and the era, very well indeed.

Archie was the property of Mary Koze, and son Paul. The Koze family owned the great barn-like structure on the corner from which was dispensed feed and seed and the other essentials of life, in that distant, delightful rural time. "Hard news" was not easily come by, and an enterprising young journalist might seek out story sources that would would make a latter-day scribe turn in his guild button.

Archie was such a source. A mut, perhaps, by another's standard, Archie was to me the source of wisdom, the oracle who saw all things, and who shared that fore-knowledge with this fortunate reporter. Sometimes his talent was beyond the comprehension of mere man.

"Where do you get off predicting that the city is sure to get stung on that reservoir hill deal?" the mayor would demand. "I have a good mind to punch you right in the nose, newsy."

Punch Archie, I would reply, for therein rests the source of all my knowledge, particularly in the tender political climes. It was an answer that so dumfounded the antagonist that I would survive all my St. John Street years of jounalism, with nary one bloody nose.

For reasons that I cannot now comprehend, we went through the next decade or so without benefit of such canine counsel. Perhaps I thought Archie was irreplaceable. Perhaps I suspected the local politicos were getting wise to my cover. Looking back, I am convinced those were also the dull days of my newspapering effort. Without a dog to inspire me, the words on paper were lifeless, the phrases lacked fire.

JFK was the byproduct of a decision that led us, at a later time, to seek out "a nice little dachshund for the children. They're also clean and easy to manage," she assured me. It would be one of her more misguided anticipations.

JFK was a cross breed, or so I was informed. I know little of such things having been raised to approach animal husbandry with the same disdain given sex, or holding hands in grammar school.

"He must be a cross between a mule and a cow," I announced, after we had enjoyed JFK's company for two weeks, which included 14 escapes from the yard, and 14 calls to Joe Medeiros, who doubled as the city poundmaster in those economized days.

It wasn't just that JFK would roam, it was, more pungently, that she always roamed toward the city's sewer works. The drying ponds, to be exact. It was there, among the dried and decaying wastes of all humanity, that JFK found her own kind of solace.

"She stinks!" I declared one day. "I am tired of bathing that monster every other day, I am tired of hassling the poundmaster, and I don't give a damn if she is named after the president of the United States of America ... THAT HOUND HAS GOT TO GO." For the first time in memory, it was a decision that went uncontested in the Second Street mafia. Besides which, the stupid hound never did impart any great wisdom, a-la Archie. My writings were simply not inspired. I suspected it was because of the dog's political affiliation.

Ritzie came to us a baby. Via an ad in The Trib. From a San Leandro family that had a whole litter of little dachshunds. It was, I must confess, love at first sight. She also came with papers, to establish that her origins were more affluent, than effluent.

We named her "Ritzie," in recognition of the fact that we had first met after enjoying a delightful Peter Sellers' movie at the Ritz Theater in Hayward. (The New Ritz Theater has since gone in for the exclusive showing of naughty movies. Our Ritzie hereby disclaims any connection with that new management, or its mores. Besides which, our Ritz has been neutered.)

We have been together twelve years now, my friend and I. Her slick brown coat has been burned from her long addiction to floor heaters. There are clear signs of grey around the mouth, and a strange lump on the left lip. Neither does she move with the agility of other years, the legs lack that old spring, the back is often ouchy.

"I think the dog and I are growing old together," I announced one day, to no one in particular. It was amazing how many heard me, just this once, and so readily agreed.

"Yes, we really ought to have the vet look at that growth on her lip," the lady of the house said. But there is the terrible fear of what a medical examination might uncover, and the awful counsel ... "at 12 years of age, you really ought to consider ...." So we avoid such a confrontation, my friend and I. We live with the infirmities of time, content that they are also tribute to a busy life.

Has Ritzie been the inspiration for some enlightened writings? To be sure. Only a fool could stare into those soulful eyes, contemplate that wise-sad visage, and fail to come away a more enlightened being. Lately, she has been staring into my soulful eyes.

"Has anybody fed the dog?", I announce. "Then why does she keep staring at me that way?"

"She associates your coming home with being fed, that's all. You ought to be flattered," I am informed. I am suddenly reduced to a part of the Pavlovian theory: Enter the husband, and the dog salivates. It is not society's highest calling.

"I think she has me psyched," I declared one day, after again failing to stare her down.

"It's just your imagination," I am informed. "I don't think she's well. After all, she is getting on in years."

"Enough! That dog doesn't need a vet any more than I do. A psychiatrist, maybe, to get her head back on straight. I don't think we ever got around to telling her that she's a dog, and I'm the master."

And now it's too late. Pretty soon the dumb dog will be writing the volumn, and I'll be feeding her the straight lines.

A possibility that no one questions

Recreation mecca for Bay Area's millions?

From Del Valle to Lake to the County Fair, from the watery depths of Shadow Cliffs Park to the high ridges of Sunol, this "valley" is well blessed with attractions that appeal to the visitor, as well as compliment the localite. It is all part of our heritage, although boosted significantly in recent times by ambitious new recreational endeavors.

It might be a good time — on this biggest of recreational weekends — to start wondering where we are headed, in the Bay Area's scheme of recreational things.

There is a great deal of talk these days about "preserving the ridgelands" ... a plan that, if accomplished, would bring new masses of urban humanity down the ridge tops and into the "wilderness areas" that apparently abound in this neck of the Bay Area, and in few other parts of the nine-county expanse.

The Alameda County Fair is already established as one such "attraction" to the Bay's multitudes, and the one million annual visitations now claimed by that center will pale in comparison to the two-million-plus projected in the fairgrounds' future.

Shadow Cliffs Park, Del Valle Lake and Sunol Wilderness Park are three facilities operated by the East Bay Regional Park District with aggressive two-county promotion of their particular lure. An annual crop of visitors well in excess of two million people is easily seen for that recreational trio.

Nor is that the limit for "regional recreating" in this great expanse of land, water and sky. There is one "Master Plan" that sees us as the "permanent playround for the Bay Area's multitudes," and that idea has greater strength in the m hierarchy than most us hinterland kids care to admit.

Is that so bad? Not in the view of those who see "urbanization and commercialization" as the real desecrator of land. Can we live with such a "recreational image?" Quite possibly, but only if there were some solid financial spinoff for the local communities through which much of this tourist traffic would pass.

But what about protection of the valley's environment? Ah, that is something else again. At a time when there is so much emotion about "the threat of an expanded I-580" and the "threat of a regional shopping center" and a lot of other threats to the sensitive air quality within these 600 square miles, it is amazing that there is no similar concern voiced for "the threat of tourism to our environment."

Since the gas-burning vehicle is acknowledged as the one big polluter of our skies — and the one we probably can do the least about — the contribution of travellers entering into, and wandering around this vale cannot be overlooked as a significant factor in the local smog rating.

Without claiming any scientific expertise in such matters, it seems a reasonable deduction that four million annual visitations (round trips by car or camper or motorcycle) to this valley would be the equivalent of 5000 famlies locating here, adding to our economy, and to our pollution.

(A more scientific approach might point out that the four million visitors would "peak" in the summer months, jammed into a dozen weekends, all during the worst of our smog season. Thus, from the view of air pollution quality, four million visitations might more realistically equal some 10,000 new valley families.)

In none of this do we suggest any conclusions, or even offer a valued judgement. But it is a subject worthy of our attention, certainly as much as our "fear" over such other "polluters" as retail centers, wider freeways, industry and housing.

Before we become "The Tourist Center of the Bay Area," those closest to such things might advise us as to where we stand as "The Smog Capital of the Nation."

For Sunday, July 6, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Double-check the validity of supposedly confidential information passed to you today. Your source may have some facts confused.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You still have to be extra-careful in any financial transactions today, or you're not likely to get full value.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't let indecisiveness about your plans today affect companions who expect to share an activity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A friend is going to be disappointed when she learns you've revealed what she told you in confidence to a third party.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll have to make an extra effort today not to overindulge in the good things life has to offer. If discipline goes by the boards, so will your waistline.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) To gain admiration from others today you may expand a bit more than you should about a recent accomplishment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're overly sensitive today in dealing with friends. Be careful not to expect more than they're capable of giving.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be sure that one you're involved with in an interest is not looking to you and your resources to sponsor the venture single-handed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A more dominant personality will be making up your mind for you today to do things you won't enjoy, if you don't stand up for your rights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your drive and persistence will desert you today when you run into resistance you could normally handle. Keep plugging.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Take with a grain of salt promises or propositions offered you today by persons at an informal gethering.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have a tendency to put yourself down today when you compare yourself mentally to another. You're wrong. She's not all that hot.

Your Birthday

July 6, 1975

You'll make an interesting and lasting friendship this year with one whom you'll- meet under very unusual circumstances. Material profit will also result.

Eye of the storm

Mary Bacon, one of the Midwest's leading jockeys, made her California debut Thursday at the Alameda County Fairgrounds, riding Windy's Luck to a ninth place finish in the ninth race. Controversy has followed Bacon to the West Coast. She was forced out of several Hollywood Park races due to allegations she was a member of the Klu Klux Klan. However, the 27-year old rider said those charges had been "blown out of proportion", adding that she had merely attended one Klan meeting as a guest. (photo by Pete Griffith)

Livermore Stars take marathon

In weather hot enough to curl a manhole cover, the Pleasanton-Livermore District Five All-Star game was played to its fulfillment Saturday morning, and a portion of the afternoon too.

In seventeen innings, Livermore emerged the winner, 7-6.

With one out in the bottom half of the 17th, Livermore's Bill Bachleoa singled up the middle. Bachleoa went to third standing up, as extended reliever John Costello threw the ball away. That set the scene for Kevin Gosney, who was intentionally walked and easily moved to second.

Jeff Davidson attempted to squeeze Bachleoa home, but the St.Mike's baserunner was out halfway down the line. Gosney then moved to third. Davidson then drilled a two-two Costello pitch to center, driving in Gosney with the winning run.

Ironically, it was a pitching duel through 17-plus. Tied at five apiece after the regular seven, both clubs couldn't produce for the next six innings. Not until the 13th did Pleasanton score.

Both Gosney and Pat Drier were superb in relief. Gosney, who came in for starter Jeff Perry in the eighth, went the final 10, allowing seven hits and a single run.

Drier was almost flawless too, issuing one hit and one run in working five innings. Mike Krikorian, who started for Pleasanton, worked the first eight, but ran into trouble in almost every inning. Betrayed by his colleagues in the field, Krikorian compensated for it by striking out 12.

Pleasanton entered the sixth inning down 4-2, but two controversial calls set them up, and they took the lead. Mike Hoff singled, and Scott Vaughn hit into an apparent double play. But both runners were ruled safe, and Jeff Bailey bunted safely to load the bases.

Sam Sisneros then sacrificed Hoff home, and Guy Houston climaxed the scoring with a howling double to deep right field.

St. Mike's retaliated, as Mark Davis, who reached on a walk, came home on an infield error.

From that point on, not much doing. However, both clubs threatened.

Drier opened the Pleasanton 13th with a single and reached second on a sacrifice by Vince Costello. Bill Bevilacqua pushed across the go-ahead run with a long double to center.

Davidson came home with St.Mike's tying run on a perfectly executed suicide squeeze by Steve Allen. Davidson reached on a walk, stole second, and was sacrificed to third by Darryl Stone.

Pleasanton had an excellent chance to break it wide open in the tenth. With runners on first and second and one out, Houston tried to squeeze a run across, but popped up to Gosney, who turned it into an inning-ending double play.

As mentioned by one partisan following the methodical 12th, "It's a typical Pleasanton-Livermore get together." —Marty James

Fair attendance up

Bolstered by a huge, free-spending Fourth of July crowd, the Alameda County Fair racing meet is substantially ahead of last year, in both attendance and mutuel handle.

Based on the first five days of both the 1974 and 1975 meetings, this season's attendance is up 4.9 per cent (49,586 as opposed to 47,258). The betting handle is up 8.6 per cent ($4,659,738 to 4,292,225 last summer).

However, these figures are misleading, according to Director of Racing Everett Nevin.

"Last year the Fourth was a Thursday," he said, "so we naturally didn't get as big a crowd as we did this year, leading off the weekend."

This year's Independence Day crowd, 18,491 strong, poured a record $1,360,610 through the betting windows. The overflow throng also established a new standard for Daily Double wagering.

The marks were set in spite of, Nevin believes, the new fair circuit format, which places a quarter horse race in the middle of the program. Traditionally two quarter horse races and an Appaloosa chase opened the day, followed by nine consecutive thoroughbred offerings.

"The fans aren't betting on the seventh race like they would for thoroughbreds," the veteran horseman said.

"And the third race (first thoroughbred) has been hurt, too. People are standing in line to buy their Daily Double tickets, so many don't bet on the third race because they'renot used to the new schedule," he added. The second half of the Fair meeting gets underway Monday, with five added money races scheduled for the coming week.

Wednesday, a dozen three-year old fillies go to the post in the $10,000 Senorita Stakes, followed Thursday by the Fillies and Mares Handicap, also a $10,000 added affair.

Lippestreu's crew running Springtown

Las Positas Golf Course professional Dan Lippstreu assumed operation of Livermore's Springtown Golf Course last Tuesday.

For a $700 monthly stipend, and five per cent of green fee revenues on the nine-hole course, Lippstreu and his staff will operate the starter's shop and collect fees.

The City of Livermore will continue to maintain the course it purchased two years ago.

Lippstreu's lease on the tiny starter's shack at Springtown is an addendum to his lease with the city for operation of the 18-hole Las Positas course.

Until Lippstreu took over last week, Springtown, an executive golf course, was marshalled by part-time fee collectors, not golf professionals. The City of Livermore asked the golf pro to assume the shop duties at Springtown. "It was costing us about the same amount of money to have starters out there, and they weren't professionals," said Dan Lee of the Livermore Public Works Department. "They couldn't do as good a job at marshalling or promoting golf. What this does is turn it over to the professional to set up tournaments and provide better service."

Green fees will remain the same at Springtown, Lee said. Rates are $3.50 for 18 holes of golf on a weekday, and $5 on weekends.

No major changes are planned on the course, Lee said, although Lippstreu will stock the starter's shack with golf merchandise.

Down the road, Lee said, is a plan to relocate the one-room shack situated now near the first tee, and install a driving range.

The Springtown course cost the city $14,000 to operate this past fiscal year, Lee said. Forecasts at the start of the year said it would take $25,000 from the city budget. During the year 25,000 rounds were played at Springtown, against an estimate of 19,000.

"It's going well, there are no complaints," Lee said.

Bankers clinch division with win

First Bank of San Leandro, Pleasanton's entry in the local Alcosta Babe Ruth League, clinched its division title yesterday with a 3-1 victory over Berkeley.

Pleasanton's Mark Bevilacqua pitched the entire game, striking out eight and allowing no walks.

Berkeley errors set up the first two Pleasanton runs, in the fourth and fifth innings. In the seventh, First Bank scored again when Mike Johnson singled, went to second on Greg Bellinger's sacrifice, and came home on Rich Hall's triple.

Berkeley managed a run in the seventh, but Bevilacqua initiated a unique double play to help erase the threat of a rally. With the bases loaded, Mark faked a pickoff move to second, instead firing to first to get the runner there. The runner at second was cut down, first-short-third, while the runner at third crossed the plate. Bevilacqua struck out the next batter to end the game.

Black Cherry Glaze

¾ LB Black Cherries
1 Orange
1 Lemon
½ teaspoon Ginger
1 cup ground sugar
½ cup Sherry
1 Safeway Oval Picnic

Pit cherries, cook for 5 minutes. Add juice from orange and lemon, ginger, sugar, and sherry. Continue to simmer for 10 minutes. Put over picnic and bake at 300° for 20 minutes per pound. Add ¼ cup of Brandy, if desired. Serve remaining sauce with dinner . . . IT IS DELICIOUS.
